Q: Why does the Zalorian Ship of Fools have the value 100 when it is destroyed? In Rogue One: A Star Wars Story, the Zalorian ship the Cell has the value 100 when it is destroyed, as detailed in this screenshot: However. why does the Zalorian ship Cell have the value 100 when destroyed? The ship's value is described in the following sentence: The people of Zaltin carry out their business and daily lives with the Cell's value prominently displayed on their doors and vehicle doors, though the ship is non-functional and untouchable. A: This is an oversimplification of the canon; the value represented by a Zalt

The script is really simple: On my server I'm using the error reporting set to 4 (Development) mode, and the error is: 500 Internal Server Error. It's taking me a few hours to fix this, so any help would be great. A: You're not providing an email address to actually mail, that's why it is returning a 500 error. Make sure to do something like this in your code: $to = "somebody@someplace.com"; $headers = "From: from@somewhere.com"; $subject = $_POST["subject"]; $body = "Here is the message". " ". $_POST["message"]; mail($to, $subject, $body, $headers); So, the body of the message is actually stored in $body before it gets 0cc13bf012
